TASK 4 News Report

Motivation to online language learning

by Jackie Kennedy

for «Horizons High Weekly» magazine, May 18th, 2020

Introduction

The main aim of this report is to describe the reasons that motivate people to choose online language learning above other methods of education. On behalf of «Horizons High Weekly» my team has conducted an online survey among students of our school and adults aged from 20 to 45. The survey was conducted with 285 participants and allows us to observe rather precise statistics.

Main Reasons

After analysing survey results, we could highlight six main reasons for choosing online language learning. The most frequently mentioned reasons among students were flexible schedule (31%) and multimedia content (20%). Among adults there are lower prices (33%) and less time investment (24%). The last two points, however, were less common among students. Only 14% were interested in pricing and 15% were interested in timing. Adults were less interested in multimedia content (10%). Other commonly mentioned reasons are: more frequent assessments and variety of language classes.

Causes and predictions

It can be suggested that the main cause of such discrepancies is the occupation of the participants. Students who do not have jobs are less likely to concern about pricing and time consumption, as they have a lot of free time. Adults are interested in efficiency of studies, because they tend to be naturally more pragmatic. The overall picture of motivating reasons is not expected to change critically in the future. however, we can predict that online learning will continue gaining popularity.

Conclusion

To sum up, we can infer from the survey that significant benefits which attract people to online learning are its pricing, schedule flexibility, timing and content. Even considering different priorities, we can say that online learning is convenient and attractive for different age groups and potentially continues to be such.
