Dear Jane,
 I hope you're glad to receive this letter. It was a pleasure to write it.
 As you know I've started going to a gym. In two months I saw a significant improvement in my stamina. Moreover, exercises accommodated me in ~~relief~~ stress relief. In a while I took up ~~stretching~~ regular stretching because I wanted to achieve ^{elegant} graceful posture.
 As for my mental health, feeling anxious about ~~exam~~ the proceeding exams, I started journaling. I've found it beneficial for maintaining a peaceful mind.
 My diet has lately increased in the number of greens, which resulted in my gut ^{health} and skin health improvement. However, I still possess a harmful habit of eating ~~excess~~ excessive amount of sweets.

Overall, although I can't acknowledge myself to be the ~~happiest and healthiest person in the world~~ ^{all bright and breezy}, my well-being is tolerable and I believe it will only get better when I introduce a regular sleep schedule ^{in my life}, as well as spare time for social interactions with amiable people ^{and attending a physician}.
 So far I'm grateful to myself for putting effort into ~~so~~ my well-being advancement by caring about myself both physically and mentally. Moreover, I'm proud of my patience during the introduction of the necessary habits. I hope I will stick to the path of wellness in the future.

Tell me what challenges have you persevered through during the self-improvement journey? Have you succeeded in making your diet sugar-free? In what state is your sleep schedule?
 Sorry to stop now. I'm looking forward to you reading this letter.
 Best wishes,
 Jane
