It was a dark rainy night. In one peaceful village there lived two young lovers. Their ~~long~~ bond resulted in a birth of a child. Sadly, that night the mother couldn't survive the birth of her daughter. But the father could not bear with the death of his love. He was haunted by a mad idea of bringing her back at any cost. Once, 10 years past his wife loss, he walked onto a lonely magician's house. Answering the man's pleadings the magician offered him a book. When he returned home he immediately started the ritual he needed — the one, that could bring his loved to life, at a cost of his daughter.

Suddenly the door opened. And the windows, and all of the shelves. They started opening and closing constantly, like if a wind filled the house, except it didn't. Afraid of his own actions, the man ran out of the house. Outside, where he and the other villagers stood, the dark clouds slowly and menacingly formed a dragon. The father knew what to do. Blinded by his goal, he pushed his own little daughter towards the monster. But the girl herself knew about the ritual and was ready for this very moment. Pulling out a sword, she ran at the beast. And they fought, several days and nights. Exhausted and knowing she couldn't stay in this village any longer, the girl ran.

I could not believe that something like that could happen. But actual people that are now living in these areas say that they hear her singing about her life in the nights.
