Task 4

It has been debated whether four-day workweek is beneficial or not. Obviously, there are diverse opinions on the subject. Some people claim it is, while others report its prevailing drawbacks and lack of productivity. I side with the supporters of four-day schedule.

On the one hand, the system is considered efficient for numerous reasons. Firstly, research has proved positive influence of four-day schedule on employees. Not only do they feel ~~that~~ more motivated but also note increased productivity. Secondly, shorter workweek provides workers with more free time and, consequently, gives them an opportunity for personal growth and refreshment. ~~It is~~ ~~fact~~ Moreover, it is a well-known fact that people whose personal needs are satisfied perform better on their workplace than those who suffer any sorts of privations.

On the other hand, there are people who believe that condensed workweek is of disadvantage to ~~the~~ employees' output, ~~and~~ even though advantages are evident. ~~Some~~ Some problems with the ~~implementation~~ implementation of the schedule, if ~~the~~ industry requires constant service, may arise what is more, some workers report the sensation of increased pressure ~~when doing~~ ^{when doing} the same amount of tasks in shorter time. I believe ~~at~~ aforementioned problems arise due to incorrect approach and implementation. ~~Moreover~~ Some enterprises tend to prioritise statistics rather than the needs of their employees.

In conclusion, I am convinced that the four-day workweek can be a very productive strategy when applied wisely. It is also important to set national priorities and establish a correct approach.

Task 5

You might have seen this popular hashtag "What If..." Users have their comments on what would be if something did or did not happen. But what if they didn't have such an opportunity? # What If Social Media Didn't Exist?

Daily Life

Personally, I imagine ^{the} life where only messengers are left and social media platforms have disappeared the following way. Firstly, I'd spend less time online and more time hanging out with ~~my~~ friends. There'd be more "Meet ^{Secondly,} me" messages ~~and~~ ^{and} read my past "ones. ~~if~~ I were eager to discuss something, I would join a club and not an online discussion. Thirdly, I fix my relationships with friends and relatives would become closer due to our mutual desire to ~~to~~ socialise.

~~Fundamental changes~~
~~I do believe that life would be ~~different~~ as complicated as it is now. From my point of view, there ~~is~~ always ~~the~~ problems to be solved, ~~and~~ ~~there~~ are ~~ways~~ ~~of~~ ~~solving~~ ~~them~~ ~~irrespective~~ ~~of~~ ~~the~~ ~~means~~ ~~of~~ ~~solution~~.~~

~~If people couldn't discuss~~
Fundamental changes
 I believe that life would be more complicated without social media. They are one of the means of social influence and if they disappeared, it'd be harder to influence social masses. ~~and~~ Moreover, less people would be aware of particular issues, as social media shed light on current troubles. In case of interpersonal connections, life'd become easier. There'd be no more ~~ways~~ ~~and~~ ~~ways~~ ~~and~~ ~~ways~~ people'd not pretend to be someone else to earn respect, they'd be themselves. Informational exchange ^{would} ~~will~~ be performed in real life with emotions and body language included.

~~Adaptation~~

Adaptation

Would people need to adapt? I've thought this question through and my final answer is - no, they ~~will~~ would just be relieved to put their gadgets away and talk. Not only express a view but share their personal opinion ~~that~~ ~~is~~ ~~not~~ influenced by any social media guru.

What if social media didn't exist? Share your own view and ask your friends, "What if?"
