Task 5.

(124.3)

We're all familiar with social media. ~~while using it every day, we don't quite understand how strongly it's incorporated into our daily lives~~ But in the light of the latest events, we've ~~it~~ understood how fragile the digital sphere is. So, now we should ask ourselves: what if social media didn't exist?

Imagine the impossible.

As many of you, I've ~~initially~~ thought that I'm not so dependent on social media. But having discussed this issue with myself, I've realized the truth: I would not be ~~the person I'm now~~ without it. When it comes to communication, Telegram plays the key role, Entertainment is handed by YouTube, etc. ~~and my daily routine is highly influenced by VK.~~ Without all these tools my life would be the very uncertainty itself. But at the same time I realize that after ~~an~~ ^{days or weeks} ~~some time~~ (some sort of a detoxication period) my life would be much simpler ~~than~~ without all these distractions. ~~that come with social media.~~

Challenge and opportunity.

In a hypothetical scenario where social media would disappear, the humanity would initially face tremendous challenges ^{as many businesses heavily depend on it.} ~~as the economical sphere is strongly interconnected with social media as many small ~~and middle~~ businesses heavily depend on it in terms of promotion and communication.~~ But this and a few other ^{problems} challenges would be easily ^{solved} ~~overcome~~ by returning to ^{the} traditional ways of communication. As for individuals, the same would be true. The human nature is adaptable, so after initial shock a substitute would be found. Furthermore, such a radical change would give a new life to TV and radio broadcasting. Sharing information wouldn't be hurt, it'd just take another form.

Now I recommend you all to think for a moment about what would you do without social media. We can't be sure in how the life will be in a year, so it's ~~also~~ good to have a backup plan. Share your ideas in the comments!

The four-day workweek has become a major topic of discussion in many companies as it offers a range of benefits, but also comes with several drawbacks.

Proponents of this concept argue that it enhances productivity and well-being of the workforce, thus making employees more loyal to a company. This point of view is ~~strongly~~ supported by the success of multiple pilot programmes. In contrast, some experts ~~argue~~ point out that such a change has the potential to lower productivity, proves to be disruptive and have a negative impact on the spheres which require constant presence of workers. Furthermore, the success ~~or~~ in implimenting ^{the} four-day workweek heavily depends on the ability of ~~the~~ managing teams to rethink the workflow and adapt it ~~for~~ ^{to} the new rules. The attitude of workers also differs from case to case. For some this is an opportunity to restore their work-life balance, ~~for~~ ^{for} others ~~this is~~ - something that destroys the order they are used to, an unwanted change, which brings the need to work more in less time.

In my mind, the four-day workweek is ~~the~~ ^{an} idea that may revolutionize the current perception of work, as it incorporates one ~~import~~ vital message: productivity matters the most. Too many people live with the ~~idea~~ idea that the more they work the better, while ignoring the quality of work. At some point, it must change.

After all, the four-day workweek has many advantages, but before ~~it can be~~ implementing it, restructuring the workflow is crucial.
